Health E-Learning: Course-Source Offers Free Conference for Health Professionals

E-learning specialists Course-Source are offering senior health professionals from within the NHS and the private sector a chance to discover how to maximise e-learning initiatives for clinical services and healthcare organisations.

Course-Source, winners of a 2006 National Training Award for a groundbreaking online programme in intra-operative cell salvage, an initiative that has since been adopted by the UK Blood and Tissue Transplantation Services, is hosting this exclusive event over lunch at the Clinical Education Centre, Glenfield Hospital, Leicester, on Wednesday 12th December 2007

Speakers are Laurence Wilson, an e-learning specialist and board member of TACTICS (Training Assessment and Competency in Trent Intra-operative Cell Salvage), who developed the e-learning content for the NTA Award-Winning programme and, live online from his new home in New Zealand, Malcolm Chambers, a former member of the learncellsalvage Editorial Board and the classroom trainer at Nottingham Queens Medical Centre where follow-on intra-operative classroom courses were conducted.

To register for this learning and networking opportunity for senior health professionals only, or to express interest in similar events nationwide, please contact Course-Source on 020 7689 6700 or email info@course-source.net
